IRU Vice Chancellors’ Fellow

Overview:
The Innovative Research Universities (IRU) is a network of 6 comprehensive universities committed to inclusive excellence in teaching and research. We are Charles Darwin University, James Cook University, Griffith University, La Trobe University, Flinders University and Murdoch University.

We reach and serve local and global communities through an effective response for all who seek our services at the highest standards in teaching, learning and research.

Working collectively, IRU is at the constructive centre of Australian university policy-making, influencing political developments beyond individual university capacities to do so.

This is a fixed term (3 years), full time position based at Griffith University or La Trobe University.

The Role:
The IRU have a distinctive commitment to broadening participation in higher education providing a life-long education base for our graduates.

The IRU Vice Chancellors’ Fellow will lead an exciting new project focused on student and graduate success in the context of radical changes to the nature of future work. The appointee will work closely with all 6 member universities to improve the educational and employment outcomes for IRU students.

The Person:
The Fellowship is open to senior academic staff seeking the opportunity to further extend themselves as a leader in the field.

You will have an adaptable skill-set that will help you to deliver creative solutions to big problems.
You should enjoy collaboration, excel in using evidence to support innovation for students from all backgrounds, and have exceptional negotiation and leadership skills.

Your understanding of the needs of future graduates in the Australian education sector, combined with your energy and passion for educational access, will help you to make a real difference by creating a new culture as the IRU Vice Chancellors’ Fellow.

You will work closely with IRU Executive Members during the Fellowship and significantly develop your policy research and program delivery skills as a basis for future senior roles.

Salary range:
Academic Level D: $131,801 – $145,205 per annum. Salary package including 17% employer superannuation contribution: $154,208 – $169,890 per annum.
